Extendicare proposes to build, run hospitals

By Andrew Milne

Extendicare has made a proposal to the health board in which the firm would handle virtually all aspects of the construction of the county's hospitals.

The private firm would also have a contract to run both facilities for the board following construction.

Board members came out of a Friday meeting with the giant health care provider highly enthusiastic about the possibilities.

Haliburton Highlands Health Services (HHHS) executive director Foster Loucks described the proposal the firm had made as offering the board a 'turn-key operation', in which the project management, the design, the construction, the financing and some systems supports would all be done or arranged by Extendicare.

A particularly attractive feature of the proposal, said Loucks, was that Extendicare would guarantee its price, and that the board's cost would not be substantially above the project cost estimate previously laid out in the Coulson report, upon which provincial funding for the project has been based. Therefore, he says, there would be no substantial additional cost to local ratepayers under the proposal.

Loucks said the board will not yet reveal the precise details of Extendicare's quote because it has not yet been accepted, and other firms might still be quoting on the project. However, he was able to indicate that the capital planning portions of the quote — in terms of the construction of facilities planned — would be substantially different than those plans the public has previously seen. In particular, Extendicare would make greater use of the existing Hyland Crest physical plant. The consulting company which previously looked at the problem had said the Hyland Crest building no longer met standards for long term care facilities, and had recommended building a separate building entirely on the site, rather than use the existing building.

That previous quote, by health care consulting group Agnew Peckham, in association with architects Montgomery & Sisam, posed difficulties for the board because it was millions of dollars over the quoted estimate from the Coulson report of $10.3 million.

Asked if he was surprised that Extendicare could manage to make the project fit under budget, where Agnew Peckham had such difficulty, Loucks replied that yes, he was. "I want to see some further detail," he said, "as to how they can staff the facility they're describing. There must be some savings they can provide us because of their systems, their way of doing things, their size. But yes, I'm surprised. Talking to Agnew Peckham, in terms of the preconstruction operating budget, they had impressed upon us it would be pretty tight to make it all work."

The board decided to look at other approaches to the project shortly after receiving initial quotes from Agnew Peckham, said Loucks.

Extendicare has also offered to help with the capitalization of the project. The proposal would furthermore include

In Remembrance

Legion Sergeant at Arms Peter Overington (right) and life member Mel Roberston pay their respects to those lost in the wars yesterday at the Minden cairn.

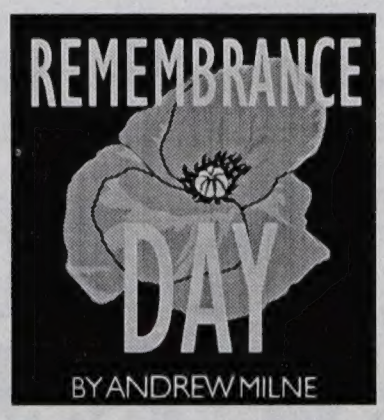
Minden Vets remember 'good days and bad'

On Sunday, Syd Adamson laid a wreath for two friends with whom he had gone to war.

"When I went into the service in '41," said Adamson, in an interview two days earlier, "they used to say a gunner today, a goner tomorrow. I had two friends who went over with me. I'm the only one who came home. They didn't make more than six trips.

"One got shot down over Essen. I'd been his best man. He was American. He didn't have to be there. He'd volunteered to serve with the Canadian forces. The other fellow had also been at the wedding, He got washed up in the North Sea."

'I could tell you about the good days'



Adamson was a gunner in an Allied bomber — filling the mid-upper position in one of the rugged Lancaster bombers that were a mainstay of the Allied forces in Europe. He spoke briefly of his experiences in the war together with Maurice Winterflood, and with Don Graham, last Friday.

Winterflood served on a Canadian frigate — the HMCS Sea Cliff — in the Atlantic, guarding convoys against U-boats. Graham drove a tank for the army's Sixth Hussars, primarily in Italy.

All three have memories of what it is like to be in combat. All knew people who did not make it to the end of the conflict alive. Curiously, however, that isn't what they tend to remember first.

Says Winterflood, "It was an experience for me. Being young it sounded all very enchanting and wonderful, going over to another country and all this hype. It wasn't until you got a little older that you realized just exactly what was going on around you."

Winterflood himself first saw combat almost immediately after putting to sea the first time in the Sea Cliff, in late December, 1944. The frigate was called by a nearby corvette — the HMCS St. Thomas — to assist in sinking German U-boat U877. Corvettes were a smaller ship which, along with the even smaller minesweepers, participated with the

Questionnaire results will determine fate of project

The Minden Legion Branch 636 has issued a questionnaire to see how much interest there is in retirement housing for seniors in the Minden area. A total of 2,200 questionnaires have been distributed to all the households in the Minden area.

"This is the first step," says Legion Branch 636 President Lloyd Johnson. "We can't do anything else until we find out the results of the survey."

Johnson says the intention is to learn if there is enough interest to go ahead with a project and to discover what type of housing retired people and seniors would prefer.

"The Legion is prepared to take a lead role and assume sponsorship of this housing development," the preamble to the questionnaire points out.

The proposed development plans specify one and two bedroom apartment style accommodations, either in the form of attached bungalows or two or three storey apartment blocks.

If the interest is sufficient, the development would be built in phases, according to the demand.

The development would be located in Minden and units would be sold "at an affordable level, on a Life Lease basis." Purchasers would have equity in their units. Monthly charges for such things as taxes, grounds maintenance, common area insurance, and administration would be kept to a minimum. Utilities for each unit would be the responsibility of the purchaser.

Whether or not the project proceeds to the construction stage will depend on the information gained from the questionnaire. It must be completed and received at the Minden Legion (P.O. Box 238, Minden, ON, K0M 2K0) before December 16.

Younger families may fill out the questionnaires for parents, in-laws or friends who live outside the Minden area but may be interested in moving here to be closer to family and friends.

"It is important to us that you complete the questionnaire even if you are not interested in this particular project," Legion officials appealed.

HCSA celebrates 25th Anniversary

by Jerry Grozelle

The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association (HCSA) celebrated its 25th anniversary November 2 with a dinner and dance at the Haliburton Legion.

Among the evening's guests was Bert Grant, President of the Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs (OFSC).

"Organized snowmobiling has a long and honourable tradition in Haliburton," Grant told the assembled club members.

He pointed out that the HCSA was one of the founding members of the OFSC 30 years ago in Midland.

"In 1978 and '79, Roy Bates of Haliburton was one of my predecessors as President, Grant said. "More recently, Peter Overington has carried the Haliburton torch at the OFSC level, serving as our First Vice-President and Chair of our Safety Committee. Our thanks go to Peter and his wife Eileen for their years of dedicated volunteer service to both the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association and the OFSC."

Grant said he was not only there to celebrate with the HCSA members, he was also there to bring congratulations from the other 293 clubs and from the OFSC Board of Governors, senior volunteers and office staff.

"Most of all, I bring you a challenge," Grant said. "Over 25 years, the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association has been a powerful force in organized snowmobiling in Ontario. You have paved the way for many others who have emulated your success and learned from your experience. You can, and should, be proud of your snowmobiling legacy and the winter prosperity it has brought to Haliburton.

CELEBRATING 25 YEARS: Several of te past presidents of the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association were joined by Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs President Bert Grant (right)at the HCSA's 25th Anniversary party November 2 at the Haliburton Legion.

"But that's in the past. Your challenge tonight, ladies and gentlemen, is to not look back, to not rest on your laurels, but to look ahead to tomorrow. You have the resources, experience, infrastructure and membership to achieve whatever goals you have set for yourselves."

Grant said that with the new leadership, the club "has the will, the commitment and the team spirit to make it happen."

"The future is yours and I look forward to watching the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association seize it with renewed vigor and enthusiasm," Grant said.

He added that the OFSC needs motivated clubs with positive vision and clarity of foresight.

"I applaud your longevity; I commend your dedication; and most of all, I salute all of you, the volunteers who have kept this club going for a quarter century and who will make us all proud again on your gold anniversary in 2021," Grant concluded.

Peter Overington said the reason he came to live in Haliburton county was the snowmobiling. "It's addictive," he said.

Overington counted the fellowship and friendships he has made among the most gratifying aspects of snowmobiling for him.

Economic impact studies, Overington says, are the buzz words in places like New Hampshire, where he recently attended a conference. "We were doing them 10 years ago," he said. "You should be proud of what you've done here. We lead -- they follow."

Overington said the snowmobiling fraternity faces some challenges, the biggest of which is the accident record.

"We have to provide an example," he said. "Alcohol and snowmobiles absolutely do not mix. Alcohol is the biggest contributing factor to accidents."

Overington says he is a strong believer in the Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs and he urged everyone to support the OFSC.

Haliburton County Warden Murray Fearrey said the HCSA is a success story and pointed out the value of the volunteer projects that have been done by the club. "There's a lot of history packed into the last 25 years," he said.

Natural Resources Minister Chris Hodgson was unable to attend the event, but he sent a note of congratulations to current HCSA President Ken Evans.

"Please pass on my congratulations and thanks to members, past and present, for their work and dedication to promoting safe snowmobiling through some of the most beautiful country in Ontario, Hodgson said. "As the membership grows, along with Ontario's trail system, more and more people will appreciate the services you offer.

"You should all be very proud of this 25 year milestone and I wish you many more years of snowmobiling enjoyment," he said. "See you on the trails."

The Haliburton County Loggers Association has made a contribution to the Minden Fire Department's equipment fund. The $1,214.60 donation was made by Roger Danilko, right, to Fire Chief Bill Hogg. Local board's accountability would still matter, says Loucks a management deal, in which Extendicare would act as the on-site operator of both Minden and Haliburton sites.

"The advantage of Extendicare's approach," said Loucks, "is that we don't have to get into tendering all the rest of the pieces. We simply go to the politicians, to the ministry and to the health council, and say all right, this company is prepared to work with us on a partnership basis. Here's a fixed price. They'll do the rest of it for us. What we're endorsing is that model of doing it. We'll work out the details with them and with the ministry as we go."

Although Extendicare is a very large, very experienced company, and the board is a very young, very small organization, Loucks said he believes something can be worked out in which the board's public accountability for the project would still mean something.

Said Loucks, "I believe so. I know there will be some questions around that. We're still talking about public money, and Extendicare, I think, is very sensitive about not wanting to take away from the community — not leaving the community with the perception that they don't have control of what is going on."

Loucks said he also wished to emphasize that the board has not signed a contract yet. "We have merely indicated we wish to pursue this further," he said. "We don't know what level of competitive process the Ministry is going to insist on."

On behalf of Branch 636 of The Royal Canadian Legion, I would like to express our heartfelt thanks & appreciation to the members of our Ladies Auxilliary, The Girl Guides, Cadets, our out of town members, the merchants and the public who participated & supported our successful poppy campaign. May we always remember them.

frigates in convoy duty.

"We were excited that we had sunk it," says Winterflood. "We had seen what the submarines could do. Most of the subs in the later years they outgunned us. They had bigger guns than we did. They had 4.5, 5 inch guns some of them. And this was why the corvette asked for our assistance. They had only a single gun forward and we had the twin.

"We got a couple of good hits right below the conning tower and the ship went down. The captain was the last to go and I think he went down with her. Standing there with his arm up in the air saluting Hitler."

They rescued 21 survivors from the sub, and Winterflood asked the German prisoners to sign their names on the backs of two photographs he had with him at the time. He holds them up now, somewhat worn from the years.

"I was a kid, and it was exciting," he says.

December 27, 1944, days after Winterflood first went to sea, the Sea Cliff turned over her prisoners to the marines in Scotland.

Says Winterflood, "Believe me those marines were a real nasty lot. They gave some of those Germans more bleeding backs — the marines had fixed bayonets and they were just pushing them off the side. They'd had their homes bombed and their wives and kids killed and they were not a happy lot."

Graham signed up in 1941, and was assigned to the Sixth Hussars tank regiment out of Montreal. After a short period of training at Camp Borden, and some time in the south of England, waiting for the German invasion, he was sent to Italy.

He drove, most of the time, a protective tank for the general of his division. There were six tanks running the bodyguard duty.

He shrugs when asked what it was like. "We had good days. We had bad days," he says.

He remembers a country devastated by war, children fighting over his garbage. He shakes his head at the memory, isn't sure how to continue. Sure, he says, it was upsetting. "But there wasn't a damned thing you could do about it."

Graham was injured when a man next to him picked up a grenade, and it went off. The man who picked it up was killed. Graham wound up in hospital.

He doesn't like to talk about it, doesn't seem to like to elaborate on the incident or most of his experiences in combat — and he had more than a few. He says simply that he spent some time in the hospital, and came back to his unit.

"I could tell you hundreds of good days we had," says Graham. "I remember them. I don't like to remember the bad days."

He does remember what it was like being attacked by the German air force while at sea.

"When we went in through the Mediterranean," he says, "just at dusk the German air force came in and gave us one hell of a beating... But we got through all right... In the tank ships, if danger comes they lock you in your compartments. So if the tank ship got hit it was sealed tight and the sections would be all right. But you could hear what was going on."

Graham was in Groningen, in north Holland when the end of the war in Europe was declared.

"We were there when the Germans had surrendered," he says. "They were marching them by the thousands on the road back to Germany. It was a pitiful

Literacy programs open doors for adult learners

by Andrew Milne

"I walked into a literacy program in Peterborough — Trent Valley Literacy Association — nine years ago. And when I walked in there I was reading Jack and Jill."

Dan Haley laughs, then continues.

"Really. I couldn't read kids' books ten years ago. And today I'm in college. My reading/writing level today is about a grade five or six level. So I've come a long way. I've got a long way to go, but at the same time, the biggest point that I try to get across... is that adults can learn to read and write."

Haley, an adult learner in his forties, spoke to a workshop organized by the Haliburton Highlands Literacy Association this weekend.

He speaks in a forthright, enthusiastic manner about his experiences. And it's infectious. Difficult though his story is, he says, he's making it. And he's happy.

But it's been a long road.

"I was brought up in a very abusive home," says Haley. "I was beat up every day, and told I was stupid every day. If you're told that often enough you start to believe it. I got into drinking and doing drugs, trying to cope that way. I didn't do too well that way, either. But I've been off that ten years now.

"I dropped out of school when I was sixteen years old. Home life was just no fun. I haven't seen my parents in 23 years. I kind of got ripped off I guess. But I don't look at it that way any more. I'm okay with it now. But to try to learn as a kid, sitting in the class when you're living in that kind of environment is impossible."

"Ten years ago I winded up in jail. I was drinking. I was married, and I was an abusive character, just like my dad was. My wife and kids were gone.

"But for some reason, something happened, and I just quit doing all of that, put a cork in the bottle, and walked into Trent Valley. I just wanted something better for myself. I really didn't like living the way I was, and I didn't know what to do. I never realized they had programs here for literacy for adults. I just thought I was alone in the world."

Now, decades after dropping out, he is back, and finishing college. The pleasure he takes in that achievement is palpable.

"Oh man," he says, laughing. "I'm in college. I'm going to be finishing college. I can read all my own mail today. It's like it's a whole new world opened up for me. People who can't read and write live a very sheltered life... Five, ten years ago I never would have left Peterborough alone to try to get to Haliburton. I would have got lost."

The benefits of returning, he says, have been very concrete, and very significant.

"I'm back with my family," he says. "I have three boys... The last ten years have just been great. And it's been good for my kids. All of them have a learning disability. They're a little slower than the norm. But me going back to school has made a big difference. Especially for my oldest. He figured he'd drop out... He's kind of hanging in there now. He's in grade twelve and he's talking about college. So it's made a big, big difference.

"And it's been fun."

He's very involved with literacy. He's president of the Trent Valley association, and involved with both provincial and national level lobby groups. And hopes to stay involved.

"I've done a lot of motivational speaking," he says, "and I'd love to continue on with that, bring literacy into the minds of people in our country, really motivate adults to step out of their comfort zone, come out here and get help. Because they can make it... I'd love to say that there's jobs out there for them, but that might be going a little far. But maybe within the next five years. We have an awful lot of people with degrees doing the jobs that people with literacy problems could do. If we could get people back to work in this country, maybe they could find something. The point is, they can do it."

Barbara Nangle, the Haliburton centre's coordinator, spoke glowingly of Haley's presentation. Says Nangle, "No one can say it the way he can."

Nangle says she's seen Haley like people in the program. It's a hard road, but it's a little bit inspiring to see the ones who make it.

Says Nangle, "I had a man come into my office who was much older than Dan just a few weeks ago. Really, really touching. He said just give me a chance, I know I can learn, you know? It's a pretty harsh struggle, and I think we have to give them tremendous credit for what they put up with."

Not all of her clients, she says, necessarily learn to read. Some face disabilities which make it impractical. But they do their best, she says, to find another way around when necessary.

Says Nangle, "We're doing a lot of things now with the computer, and trying to give people who have problems other coping skills. If you can't read because you have a disability, there may be ways of getting around it, maybe with another coping mechanism. But the world doesn't have to end."

The centre has around 50 volunteers available, and averages 35 clients at any given time, who mostly receive one on one tutoring. It can be reached at 457-3430.

History need not be repeated

Complain as we may about the economy, inflation, taxes, the cost of living or a host of other things, Canadians can still be thankful for one basic human right that isn't shared in some parts of the world. We still enjoy freedoms that many cultures envy.

Although our governments may seem dictatorial at times, we live in paradise compared to the lifestyles of those who live in fear of the people who rule their lives.

November 11th is the day that has been designated to honour those who defended us during two World Conflicts. It is important that we remember the significance of Remembrance Day. It is much more than a Legion parade. It is time to reflect on the freedoms we enjoy today, thanks to those who made the sacrifices during the battles of the past.

The purpose of Remembrance Day is not only to honour our veterans, but also to instill a sense of the past so the conflicts which took such a horrendous toll won't be repeated.

So, today, when you pay your respects for the sacrifices of our forefathers, think of the soldiers, marines and airforce personnel, facing bullets, mortars, bombs and anti-aircraft fire and wondering if they would ever make it back home to their families and friends. The families of those who served in the armed forces suffered tremendous mental anguish, living with the fear that the next knock on the door may be someone bringing news that a loved one would not be returning from the battlefield.

It is a grim picture, one which those of us who haven't been there can't fully comprehend. It is a feeling that, hopefully, those of us who are too young to have experienced those fears first hand, will never have to endure that type of anguish in the future.

Because of those men and women who fought so hard to preserve the freedoms most of us take for granted, we, and future generations, will continue to have the right to voice our opinions, whether or not anyone else agrees with those opinions. Lets hope we, and the generations to come, never lose sight of that fact.

The phrase "Lest We Forget" was well chosen. Years of relative peace have a tendancy to make us complacent. We need to appreciate the true meaning of Remembrance Day if we hope to continue to enjoy our freedom.

Police station/ parking lot

Editor:

We know our police officers are doing the best they can under difficult circumstances created by our Provincial government.

Early in October we were rear-ended on Highway 35 north of Carnarvon, in the middle of construction After exchanging information with the other driver, we proceeded to Minden as both vehicles were driveable and there was nowhere to make a phone call to report the accident.

Arriving at the former police station (now a parking lot), we found six cruisers and no bodies. Picking up the phone labelled "Police" we were in touch with an officer in Peterborough.

First he said we should have stayed at the scene of the accident and waited for an officer. After explaining the mess that would have created in the middle of one lane construction, he said to wait there at the parking lot and he would send an officer. Then he realized he didn't have anyone available, so we could go home and an officer would call us later.

An officer did contact us at about 6:30 that evening and was very helpful after the fact.

Perhaps Mr. Harris has forgotten he is dealing with people's lives, the same people who voted for him in the last election.

Thanks to hospital

Editor:

I am writing to you to commend Minden Hospital for the quality care that they provide. For the past few years, I have used our facility for ear infections and other childhood illnesses but on October 23, I was in need of emergency care. When I entered Minden Hospital that is what I received. As a young woman, I was unaware that a haemmorage could take so little to become life threatening and because of the fast action I received from Emergency staff, Dr. Dave Fiddler and R.N. Michelle (last name unknown), that night things turned out a lot better than they could have been.

Thanks goes to everyone who helps keep the door of Minden Hospital open. I am grateful to you all.

Sincerely,
Tammy Warburton

Restructuring move 'stinks'

Editor:

The Haliburton Restructuring Committee can have their cake and eat it too. They can hire Dave Barber of Cordillera Institute. He has told them that all their jobs are safe and vital. Perhaps if we do a $15,000.00 study with our friend Dave he can show the taxpayers that we are as efficient as possible and could learn to reuse paper clips etc., to save money. This stinks. All of Canada is overgoverned. This means over taxes and under services everywhere. I am grateful to the many municipal employees in our area who do a good job for the their pay. Most of them could find employment in the real world in a matter of days, but what about our two tier county, municipal government? To believe that an honest job of amalgamation and duplication elimination would not have cost cutting benefits is a lie.

As a taxpayer, I can not sit silent while some politicians keep redundant plum jobs and try to sell us the idea that they are doing the best they can for us. I may be hated by some for writing this, but that's O.K. I hate those who steal from us by wasting tax dollars. They are creating victims whole I am merely pointing this out.

I am surprised that Snowdon ratepayers were smart enough to vote in their present council, yet stupid enough to complain about the job they do. News Flash: The M.O.E. has decreed that car windshields and seat foam are not recyclable. This means that laminated glass can be used as a stable, compact, non-toxic barrier between pollutants and the neighbouring land. Vehicle interiors are mostly foam poly products. This is an absorbant stuff that will absorb a lot of the real pollutants that you people take to the dump. The M.O.E. will monitor the products being shipped and the landfill site attendant will be your watchdog to ensure that nothing glows in the dark.

Those who own land in the area should be thankful for this brilliant move at council. Snowdon can now get more bang for their buck from taxes. I wish all of Haliburton was blessed with such forward thinking politicians. Cassandras, Fabians and Nature Nazis will always snivel at good advancements.

Respectfully,

Shredder waste threatens tourism

Editor:

As a concerned resident of Snowdon Township, over the issue of the Irondale Dump, I feel we should keep all outside garbage out of our county.

The "powers-that-be" will not allow industry into our county. How come they would allow the "waste" from industry into our county? This just does not make any sense to me. Waste that may pollute in time our environment for humans and animals alike. Then the nice clean tourist areas we have would be gone and I for one, do not want to take that risk in any part of our

"Long live the chimp"

I was in a lineup at my supermarket the other day when my eye fell on the front page of one of those trash tabloids they keep near the checkout counters. There was a big colour photograph of some decrepit old guy who looked spaced out and forlorn. I squinted a little closer.

It was Bob Hope.

The famous comedian is in his eighties now and he looks old and feeble, with rheumy eyes and crepe-like skin. He looks like a cruel parody of the Bob Hope I carry around in my mind. My Bob Hope has glistening, slicked-back hair and a ski jump nose. His black-button eyes are alert and piercing. His lips are curled in a wisecrack grin.

That's the Bob Hope who imprinted himself on my brain, back when he was middle-aged and I was a kid.

Well, now I'm middle-aged and Bob Hope is a geezer. It's difficult to get used to. Just like it's hard to get used to the idea of Roy Rogers with arthritis or Elizabeth Taylor as a pudgy grandmother.

Of course, a lot of my childhood heroes are even further down Life's road than that. Remember curly-haired Dean Martin? A guy who never seemed to have his photo taken unless he had a cigarette in one hand and a drink in the other? Dead. And everybody's favourite redhead? Married to that crazy Cuban? Everybody loved Lucy. She was immortal, right?

Wrong. Lucille Ball is gone. So, for that matter, is the crazy Cuban.

Bogey. Clark Gable. Marilyn Monroe...

Makes a guy feel old.

And that's just the humans—how about the animals that were supposed to live forever. Where are the Lassies and Rin Tin Tins of my youth? Gone, long gone. To the Big Doghouse in the Sky.

Thank heavens for Cheetah.

You don't remember Cheetah? My, you're young. Cheetah was Tarzan's sidekick—a goofy chimpanzee who followed the Apeman through the jungle. Cheetah didn't have a lot of lines to memorize. Usually he just had to jump up and down and scream EEK! EEK! EEK! But he did it well and endeared himself in the hearts of moviegoers everywhere.

I never did figure out why they gave a cat's name to a chimp, but they did and the whole world learned to accept it. And unlike Lassie and Rin Tin Tin, there was only one Cheetah. His career outlasted that of several Tarzans, including Johnny Weissmuller, Lex Barker and Ron Ely.

Cheetah was in the movies even before I was a kid. 'Way back in the early forties when Bob Hope was a spunky up and comer and even Elizabeth Taylor had only been married maybe three or four times.

He had an incredible career for any Hollywood actor, never mind a chimpanzee, but do you know what's even more incredible?

Cheetah's still around.

He's 64 years old, retired and living a life of ease in Palm Springs, California. Cheetah is owned by a fellow by the name of Dan Westfall—if "owned" is the correct word. Westfall's main function seems to be to keep Cheetah amused. And the best way he's found to do that is to make sure that Cheetah never runs out of beer or cigars.

Cheetah, it would seem, is a bit of a souse. He cracks a dozen Budweisers every day and manages to puff his way through about ten stogies as well.

"If he behaves himself" says Westfall, "I give him a bottle of schnapps once a month too."

Of course, being retired, Cheetah does his smoking and boozing in Westfall's backyard, out of the public eye.

Just as well. He'd make a helluva role model for the world's young impressionable chimps.

county.

Also, I do not appreciate the fact that council did this without making this issue public so we could express our concerns.

Local boards mean local control

Editor:

Recently in the news, we have heard that the conservative government sees value in disbanding local school boards. Many questions and concerns arise from this statement. It is being suggested that the decisions and work being done locally could be done more efficiently on a regional or provincial basis. If a regional model was adopted, and to be sure, it is already in place, Haliburton would be included in an area extending from Parry Sound, Penetanguishene, Muskoka, Barrie, Victoria County, Peterborough and Northumberland Clarington, which reaches as far as Coburg.

Since 1843, the right of a community to have local interests represented by elected trustees has been the foundation for strong public schools. Now, many people write, phone or talk in person to our trustees about their concerns with education, whether it be finances, curriculum or personnel. If the government moved to this new model as the Paroian Report recommends, the distance between you, the taxpayer and the decision-making process would grow. Local issues and concerns would be sacrificed in a huge provincial takeover scheme.

I ask you to consider the following: What will become of our local Board of Education office in such a plan? Will the employees from that office still have employment? Who will represent the taxpayers, students and parents of Haliburton County in the areas of education? Would we be allowed only one representative from our large county? Local problem solving in the area of negotiations and financing would be eliminated. And importantly, control over local tax dollars going to education would be taken out of the hands of local decision making.

Some people do have a concern with the decisions made by our local board and think that we would be better off with someone else making the decisions. I urge those people to think about this carefully. How often will you drive to Barrie to represent your views? How will we hear about items for discussion at the education meetings or the ensuing decisions made? Will we hear about decisions after the fact? Will there be someone on the committee who knows our area or who we know? These are questions to ask of yourself and our MPP Chris Hodgson before you endorse a change of this magnitude.

It is imperative that people who have a vested interest in education, trustees, parents, teachers, students and taxpayers be heard and have a say in the changes occurring. It is extremely important that we take the time to make the right changes that will help students and protect the rights of taxpayers. I suggest to you that we are standing in the path of a high speed train intent on reducing the deficit rather than improving education. I urge you to protect your local control and a 153 year old tradition of local school boards operated by elected trustees. Please take the time to ask some questions and then decide if we can do without our local school board. As an employee of this Board and a taxpayer, I want to be sure that this move is the right move for all involved. I continue to ask these questions.

Christine Lynd, President
Haliburton Women Teachers.

Redmen down Campbellford 3-1 in season opener

High School hockey

by Jerry Grozelle

The hometown fans weren't disappointed when the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School Redmen hockey team played host to the Campbellford Flames November 5. The season opener drew as many fans as a playoff game.

Although the visitors opened the scoring five and a half minutes into the game, neither the Haliburton players nor their fans gave up. With just over five minutes left in the first frame, Campbellford's Scott Greenly took a slashing penalty. A minute later, with the play behind the Campbellford net, Haliburton defenceman Andrew McKelvey moved in from the point. Jeff Wray centered the puck out to McKelvey, who one-timed it past Mike Smith in the Flames' net. Bill Dovell also drew an assist on the tying goal.

In the dying seconds of the first period, Greg Luck capitalized on a Campbellford defensive miscue. He picked off a clearing pass, and with a Flames defenceman coming across trying to intercept him on the semi-breakaway, Luck fired a low wrist shot to Smith's glove side. The shot beat the goalie, caught the inside of the post and the Redmen were in front 2-1. Luck's unassisted goal was scored with one second showing on the clock.

A play the Redmen have been working on in practice paid off with a goal in the second period. Darren Mills and Ryan Anderson were working the puck back and forth behind the Campbellford net when Nick Kulas found an opening in the slot. Anderson passed the puck out front and Kulas snapped it into the top corner.

UNDER THE GUN: Campbellford Flames netminder Mike Smith was kept busy during the third period of last Tuesday's High School Hockey game against the Redmen in Haliburton. The Redmen downed the visitors 3-1.

"It's nice to see something we've worked on in practice, click," said Redmen coach Ron Yake.

Both teams had some good scoring chances in the third period, but neither was able to solve the opposing goaltender. Redmen netminder Ashley Walker made a couple of exceptional saves, one by stacking the pads and blocking a shot from point blank range in the dying moments of the game.

"Ashley played really well," Yake said. "He controlled the puck and didn't allow many rebounds."

Yake was also impressed with the play of some of the new players, two of whom scored goals in the opening game. The defense was solid and the forwards back-checked well. Some solid hits were handed out, keeping the Campbellford players looking over their shoulders.

"The effort was there 110 per cent," Yake said. "Andrew McKelvey and Matt Galbraith were strong and steady on defense."

Yake said that veterans Jeff Wray and Dennis Woods are taking leadership roles.

The Redmen have two games scheduled for this week. They play today (Monday, November 11) against Adam Scott Collegiate in Peterborough at 3:45 p.m. and in Haliburton Wednesday, November 13 at 8 p.m.

HE SCORES: A Minden Mighty Mites marksman connects during the November 2 game against the Haliburton Huskies.

Mighty Mites whip Haliburton 10-3

Minden's Mighty Mites got off to a good start this season, skating to a 10-3 victory over the Haliburton Huskies November 2 in Minden.

The older teams haven't had much luck with the Haliburton teams so far this season, but the Mighty Mites seem to have their number in the early stages of the season.

The Huskies remained in contention until the third period, when the Minden squad scored six goals to put the game out of reach.

Tanner Graham led the Mighty Mites with a hat trick and three assists. Edward Cyr added a hat trick and one helper to the winning tally. Brent Doiron notched a pair of goals and four assists. Mike Toye scored one goal and helped set up four more. Jared Mills netted one marker and assisted on three more. Dean Hutchison and Paddy Manuge helped out with a couple of assists each.

Derek Carpenter played a strong game between the Minden Pipes.

Peewee A Monarchs blank Orono 2-0

Phillip Neville picked up a shutout when the Minden OMHA peewee Monarchs played host to Orono November 2.

After a scoreless first period, the Monarchs got on the scoreboard with six and a half minutes remaining in the middle frame. Justin Walker drew an assist on what proved to be the game winner.

Orono remained within striking distance until the last 17 seconds of the game, when Dan Nielsen scored an unassisted marker to make it 2-0.

Burke scores four goals

by Jerry Grozelle

Westside Jug City built up a 4-0 lead and never looked back in the first of two Minden Men's Hockey Association games November 4. Before the first period ended, Home Hardware cut the Westside lead in half. The middle frame saw Home Hardware add a single goal to the scoreboard, but Westside outscored Home 2-1 in the third for the 7-4 victory.

Gord Wood paced the Westside attack with a hat trick. Jamie Dollo added two goals and two assists. Single markers were scored by Darrell Gilbert and Jeff Black. Black had a pair of assists to go with his goal. John Ballantyne, Doug Schell, Craig Phillips and John Teljeur each picked up a single assist.

Scott Nesbitt netted two of the Home Hardware markers, with Joe Sullivan and Mike Keaney adding one apiece. Sullivan and Keaney each had a pair of assists, while Nesbitt and Peter Allore notched a single helper each.

Hartwick 18, KDD 8

The scorer almost ran out of room on the scoresheet when Hartwick Construction tangled with Kountry Double D in the night's second game. When the ice crystals had settled, Hartwick had taken an 18-8 victory.

Hartwick led 4-2 at the end of the first period and 9-4 after two on the way to the 18-8 romp over KDD.

Andrew Burke scored four goals and added three assists for the winners. Ivan Ingram had the high points total of the game with three goals and five helpers. Jason Stamp contributed to the win with a hat trick and two assists. Glenn Hall notched a hat trick. Tom Bagshaw and Jeff Howe each scored twice and added one assist. Wyatt Nesbitt notched one goal and two assists and Gregg Sisson picked up one helper.

John Hewson scored four of the eight KDD markers and helped set up two more. Charlie Teljeur scored twice and assisted on one, while Craig Crowe and Greg Carpenter netted one apiece. Carpenter assisted on three KDD goals and Crowe picked up a pair of helpers. Curtis Reynolds had a single assist.

Novice A Monarchs blank Beaverton 5-0

Nicki Wallace earned the shutout as the Minden OMHA novice squad blanked Beaverton 5-0 Saturday, November 2 in Minden.

Andrew Bull opened the scoring less than a minute into the game on a set-up from Mark Fisher. That proved to be the game winner. Darren Brown added two goals to the Minden tally before the first period ended. One at the 2:43 mark, assisted by Fisher and the other at 3:30, unassisted.

Twenty-five seconds into the middle frame, Fisher scored, from Gavin Hicks, for a 4-0 Minden lead. Fisher rounded out the scoring with 3:12 left in the second, notching his second goal, giving him four points.

The next home game for the novice A Monarchs will be Saturday, November 16 at 1:30 p.m. against Fenelon Falls.

SNOW REMOVAL

The Highway Traffic Act RSO 1990, Section 170 (12), states "...no person shall park or stand a vehicle on a highway in such a manner as to interfere with the movement of traffic or the clearing of snow from the highway". A constable or County By-Law Officer may have the vehicle removed from the roadway and stored at the owner's expense.

Section 181 states "No person shall deposit snow or ice on a roadway without permission in writing to do so from the Ministry or the road authority responsible for maintenance of the road." The penalty on conviction is a fine of not more than $105.00.

The cooperation of all motorists in these matters would be appreciated for efficient winter maintenance of County Roads and the Safety of others.

'We didn't get too close'

He laughs, thinking of how long he wound up waiting to come home after the war. There's a story there.

"We were called out to one of those muster parades," he explains. "They said if we'd sign up to go to Japan, they'd send us home right away.

"I spoke up. I said 'I'll rot in hell before I'll sign up again' A few others voted to stay with me."

He laughs. "The ones who signed up all went home early, and we were still waiting for ships. They got home, got their leave, then didn't have to go to Japan, because it all ended first. That was the one time I spoke out of turn."

He went back to Holland last year, for the 50th anniversary of the liberation. "I had a wonderful time," he says. "My wife and I were just treated fantastically. The Dutch people are the greatest people in the world... But if you saw — if you went through some of the places in Holland, the cruelty of the Germans to some of the Holland people was just..."

Words fail him. He thinks a moment.

"We went through some of the camps where they shipped them to the gas chambers. What can I say?"

'Every bed but ours was filled at least three times'

Adamson, for his part, counts himself very lucky to be alive. Allied bomber crews suffered appalling rates of attrition through much of the war.

"On my first squadron," he says, "after we'd moved we were in permanent quarters, so there was only two of us to a room. So that was our crew. Two each.

"Then we got moved to what they called a satellite aerodrome, and in that room every bed but ours was filled at least three times. And that was in about three months. It got to the point that we knew we were going to live, but we didn't try to get close to others. I don't know if that's human or if that's Christian, but you didn't get close to people, because how long are they going to be there? If the good lord hadn't been looking after me I'd have been dead many times."

He was frightened, he says on reflection, more than a few times. "If you say you weren't," he would say later, after the interview, "you're either lying or stupid." He laughs. "I don't want people to think I was stupid. Yes, I was afraid."

He was very lucky, and he knows it. Though neither of the men he went over with made six flights, he would survive 22 missions. Though there were holes in the bomb doors from anti-aircraft 'flak' after virtually every flight, his plane only came under fire from another aircraft once.

Curiously, however, he says, that one time, he didn't have time for fear. The plane came from out of the blue, and there wasn't time to do anything but react.

"We'd hit Genoa," he says, "and they just ran, left the searchlights pointing up in the air, the guns stopped firing. They weren't with it even in '42. The Saturday we went back to Milan on a daylight trip.

Convoy duty 'harrowing'

"Coming back over the Alps," he continues, "we had this little incident. We were attacked by a CR-42. That was a biplane. Twin machine guns. He shot us, but he didn't hit anything important."

"It was funny. There was nothing in the sky. It was after we'd done our raid, and we'd broke up, and we were coming back. We weren't like the Yanks. We had our own navigator. When we hit the target we had to be there at a certain time, but there were just too many planes to come back together.

"So it was a beautiful day, and we were out there all alone. I was reaching for a sandwich at the time. I was getting hungry by then. I guess we'd done about five hours flying by that time. And all of a sudden I looked up and there was this stupid little plane and I thought 'What the hell is that?'. Then I could see two red dots [the guns on the CR-42]."

He laughs. "Then I thought, Oh! Fire! And I'm yelling starboard, starboard. So we were diving when we hit him.

"He was going down with smoke behind him. We didn't see flames. And I still don't know. That plane could be somewhere in the Alps with a body in it."

'A fatalistic attitude'

Winterflood had his share of long nights. Convoy duty required the military escort ships to travel at the speed of the slowest vessel in the group, and crossings could be slow, harrowing affairs.

Says Winterflood, "You might have 120, 130 freighters, all shapes and sizes and forms, all lined up maybe 250, 300 yards apart. Sometimes we'd have an old coal burner in there — because they were throwing everything they had into the war by then — we'd just lost so many ships — and the best you could do was maybe eight knots."

Crossing, with the sea against them, might take 18 days, he says. That gave the submarine 'wolf packs' lots of time to find them. And find them they did.

"The submarines," he says, "used to move in at night, and they'd just sit right under a big freighter. We knew it was there but there wasn't anything we could do about it. There was just no way you could depth charge it — no way you could get it to move.

"We knew it was there and they knew we knew, because we'd pick it up on our sonar. It was just a matter of waiting until they made their move and then being ready. The ships would be all in a row and there'd be rows and rows of them. We had to keep going around that section of the row at full speed just to make sure we knew when he left. Because as soon as they'd leave, especially in the middle of the night and if it's a moonlit night up they'd come, fire a torpedo, and down they'd go again."

Yes, he says, they lost ships in convoys he guarded.

"We lost one tanker," he says. "They were away on the extreme side of the group. They were usually in the centre of the convoy... We had six ships in the escort — the leader ship (another frigate in Winterflood's group) at the head of the group, two of the smaller ships (corvettes or minesweepers) at each corner. We'd be at the rear, and there'd be one ship on patrol.

"We were away at the stern end and way off to the one side — half a mile away or better — when the tanker got hit. That was kind of messy. All you could see was the burning water, and you had to know there were people in it."

MNR introduces new Crown Land regulations

The Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR) has in place new regulations to guide activities on Crown land and protect public safety and the environment.

The new regulations apply to activities such as mineral exploration, the construction of floating or pole-supported docks and logging activities, such as road building, covered under the Crown Forest Sustainability Act (CFSA).

"People and organizations will be responsible—as they have always been—for their actions," said Natural Resources Minister Chris Hodgson. "The new regulations give companies, agencies and individuals a clear description of their responsibilities when working on Crown or private land. And the regulations also give MNR a clear mandate to enforce."

The changes will cut red tape, eliminate duplication areas such as zoning approvals, reduce the number of permits the ministry previously required and in the process, save more than $1 million in unnecessary paperwork and staff time. Before the changes in permitting, MNR processed more than 50,000 individual permits a year. The ministry expects to reduce that total number by 80 per cent.

MNR has already issued new burning guidelines that replace permits for the burning of piles of wood, leaves and grass, or slash and debris from logging, land clearing and mill operations.

The new regulations replace some work permits MNR used to issue under legislation such as the Public Lands Act and the Lakes and Rivers Improvement Act. People conducting activities on Crown or private land are expected to comply with all other federal and provincial legislation such as the Federal Fisheries Act, the CFSA, the Mining Act, the Endangered Species Act and the Planning Act.

MNR encourages people to contact their nearest district office where a series of fact sheets on the regulations is available. Ministry staff will work with the public to ensure that a clear understanding exists regarding users' responsibilities and MNR's enforcement mandate for ecological sustainability.

MNR still requires permits for many activities on Crown land, including new roads or trails, dredging, aquatic plant control and construction of docks and boathouses.

Walkers log 953 miles

Snow, cold weather and slippery sidewalks are back - so Minden walkers again are taking refuge in the hospitable halls at Archie Stouffer School. The school doors are opened at 7:30 a.m. daily and walkers are welcome until the children arrive.

Last winter, a total of 19 people walked in Stouffer. They did a total of 953 miles, which would have taken them close to the New Brunswick-Nova Scotia border if they were doing a marathon.

Morris Duff went farthest, with 203 miles around the halls. Among others were Vera Bagshaw (158), Ted Madill (104), Betty Harrison (92), Nerina Rogers (76), June Beeney (75) and Edna Morgan (65.) Three and a half circuits of the halls equals one mile.

Walking in the school is organized by the Haliburton County Branch of the Heart and Stroke Foundation. Walking is considered excellent exercise for the treatment and prevention of many diseases, including heart attacks and diabetes.

The haunting of Staanworth Court

November's arrival hasn't been greeted too warmly by residents — is it snow or rain boot time? We did however, end off October with a fun night as many children arrived in a variety of wild costumes for Tricks & Treats. Thanks to Katie Parker and her daughter and grandsons, we were very eerily decorated and one child asked aloud if this was a "haunted house". After looking around at all the evidence (including those folks sitting in the background) she declared "This IS a haunted house!"

Senior League
by Fern Donnelly

We finally have our dart games underway and we are still checking to see if there has been any improvement over the summer. So far, none to report. A couple of new players have added a few more holes in the wall but we should soon be able to accept challenges.

Euchre games continue on Friday nights and bingo on Tuesday. Plans are underway for a special supper near the end of the month and then we will be into plans for Christmas. Members agreed to donate food items to the box that will be set up in the hall.

Perhaps a good thing for us to remember is that "people who know how to laugh at themselves will never cease to be amused".

Warm memories and friends that didn't come home

(from pageg 20)

"We had to develop," he says, "a fatalistic attitude. If it was going to happen it was going to happen. And that was the only attitude you could develop when you're out there. There was no way you'd be able to swim. The life rafts and the floats didn't mean a damned thing out there. At one point I saw waves forty feet high... Being young as I was I didn't worry much. If you got worried you'd be back ashore. You couldn't eat. You'd be bringing up all the time. We had two people we had to leave in Londonderry."

Probably the closest he came to dying, he says laughing, is more a light-hearted anecdote now. He'd dozed off behind the funnels — a nice warm spot — in his hours off duty, and didn't notice when the ship changed course, turning, temporarily broadside to the waves.

"Normally," he says, "when the ship is going they head into the waves so that they're fairly stable. And anyone with a little experience can tell when they're changing course and the waves are going to come from the side... I woke up with a start and looked up to see the biggest green wave that I had ever laid eyes on coming right at me.

"I reached out just in time and grabbed the davits on the nearest life boat that was there, locked my arms around them and hung on. The darn thing lifted me right off my feet. I was just straight out, soaking wet. If I'd gone over that day they never would have found me. They wouldn't even have missed me for about two hours."

'We didn't meet again'

All three men seem to have their moments of introspection, when they think about what they've seen and been through. But overall, they say, it's funny how things seem to fade. As Graham said earlier, he prefers to remember the good days. So he remembers learning to drink red wine in Italy, the friends he made in a unit formed in Montreal. He got along well with the French Canadians, he says, and is still glad to get back together with people at reunions.

They all remember the food, and almost erupt in laughter at anecdotes of the worst they had to cope with. "It wasn't the food," laughs Winterflood, remembering that the Sea Cliff's cook had been a plumber prior to the war. "It was what they did with it."

Adamson remembers the constant scraps with the brass. He remembers the tiny facility in Manitoba where he trained. He was one of a very few Canadians present. The place seemed otherwise overrun with Australian gunners. "No one seems to know where it is," he says. "It's about 150 miles north of Winnipeg. All those times I talked to people about where they trained, no one seemed to have heard of number seven but me."

But he does remember other things. Being afraid. And friends who died.

He landed in Liverpool in December of 1941. The Canadian gunners, after meals at sea that were less than palatable, finally got one good one. And had a small celebration.

There's no real drama in how he says it. He isn't making much of it, and doesn't come back to it later. It's just what happened.

"We had a can of salmon and some biscuits," he says, "That was food... A bunch of us got together and I hadn't smoked until that time. So our celebration was a cigarette saying we would meet again."

"We didn't meet again."

CARDS OF THANKS

Jim and I purchased our property here in 1973. As I move to Belleville, I leave behind many wonderful and caring friends.
I would like to thank them for their good wishes, cards, letters, flowers, gifts, books and those who "fed" me.
I would especially like to thank the congregation of Minden United Church for their "surprise" luncheon and gift, the U.C.W. for the Life Membership pin, the Manse Committee, Donna Monk and the New Beginnings Bereavement Group, the Women's Institute and Grace Lougheed for selling my home. Take care!
Sincerely,
Doris Grant.

Sincere thanks to each of you who extended your kindness through well wishes, flowers, donations and phone calls during Edith Stank's short illness. A special thank you to Wayne and Marion Hughes, Bob and Joyce Wiltshire, Ellen and Don Holden. Also Monika, Marrissa, Les & Marion, Heather. To Gord Monk and staff for very well-done arrangements and sympathy.
Fred Stank.

Sincere thanks to Homemakers Mary Nesbitt and Shirley Warder and to Jerry for all the at-home haircuts.
Joe and Bernice McCann.

IN MEMORIAM

ASH - In memory of Garnet. Passed away November 12, 1993.
Three years have passed
Since Garnet was called
To be with The Lord
In Heaven above.
From all his family.
As husband and father
He cannot be replaced
By any other.
Wife Dorothy and families.

MISCIO: In memory of Mark,
Months have grown day by day
It's now a year since he went away
Thoughts are full and hearts do weigh
Without him here to share the way.
Time may dull the hand of fate
Memory forever recalls the date.
Sadly missed by friend Jill.
